Chamber and HFOA meet Searching for common ground

by Andrew Milne

Members of the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce and a representative of the Haliburton Forest Owners Association (HFOA) met September 8 to discuss sending a delegation to Queen's Park in an attempt to resolve the issues surrounding the Managed Forest Tax Rebate Program. The meeting ended with the HFOA looking for what president Godfrey Tyler called a "dignified" retreat from its position of cutting off public access to their land as of November 1 if no satisfactory resolution had been achieved by then.

The Managed Forest Tax Rebate Program was instituted in 1975 to bring the tax rates of landowners owning large tracts of forested property more in line with the rates granted farmers.

Says Alec Denys of the Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources, which administered the program: "it was a matter of equity between what farmers were getting as landowners and what woodlot owners were getting on similar pieces of property. The farmers received a farm tax rebate based on the findings of the Royal Commission on Property Taxation. The commission determined that farmers were paying an inequitable portion of the education tax in this province... the woodlot owners lobbied in 1974 and '75 for similar treatment."

The rebate, originally instituted by a one-year program which was thereafter renewed on an annual basis by an order-in-council, was granted to forest owners until 1993, when the Ontario government, in a move to reduce expenses, cancelled the program. Denys says the plan had cost the government a varying amount of money depending on the number of applicants and the percentage of taxes rebated in a given year. In 1989 the amount was $5.8 million province-wide.

The Haliburton Forest Owners have responded by saying that this is not equitable, and that they would be unable to continue managing their forests in a sustainable way without the rebate. Local landowner Peter Schleifenbaum clear cut a 38 acre section of his land in May of this year as a visual

First day

Many students enjoyed their first day of school last week. For these Kindergarten students in Mrs. Hynard's class at Archie Stouffer Elementary School, part of the new experience included story time and a chance to take an active part in the tale about the wheels on the school bus.

Santa planning already underway

It may only be September, but Minden Lions Club officials are already thinking about the Santa Clause Parade, which will be held on December 3.

Maurice Boyd and Bob Harrington attended Thursday evening's Anson, Hindon and Minden council meeting to ask for council's support again this year.

Boyd stressed that although the Lions Club is involved with the organization of the parade, it is the Minden community Santa Claus Parade since it is a community project.

Council agreed to provide some barriers to block off part of the community centre parking lot for a staging area for the parade. More barricades will be provided for use along the parade route.

Deputy-Reeve Lewis Stevens said that some of the members of the Community Policing Committee may be available to help out on the day of the parade. Council also agreed to allow the use of the lot by the fire hall as the destination.

The parade will be starting at 1 p.m. this year, one hour earlier than the usual starting time. The reason for the change is partly to keep people in the downtown area, hopefully to do some shopping.

On your marks, get set.....

Preparations for the Minden and area Terry Fox Run are almost complete.

"We've had tremendous support from the community," said Debbie Hilkers, one of the organizers of the Minden run. "I'm thoroughly impressed. It's the most fun thing I've ever been involved in."

The official start is at 8 a.m. but Hilkers said that anyone who comes late will be able to start until about 10 a.m.

"We didn't want people to think they had to be there right at eight o'clock on a Sunday morning," she said.

Organizers are hoping that the runners, walkers and riders will be finished the 10 kilometre course by noon.

The Minden event will start and finish in the parking lot of the community centre.

Pledge forms are still available for those who wish to take part in the fund-raising event for cancer research. Forms are available at the following locations in Minden: The Brown Owl, the Subway Sandwich shop, Mr. D's Donuts, Home Hardware, Northland Sales, both doctors' offices, both pharmacies, Larry's Video, Village Chalet and The Store-room.

"I want to stress more than anything else that this isn't a competition," Hilkers said. "It is a family, fun event with the community pulling together. We just want people to come out and have a ball."

If anyone is interested in wearing a costume in the run, a number of (as yet unspecified) prizes will be offered for the best costumes.

Santa assured a warm welcome

With at least 30 floats expected, Boyd is hoping for some co-operation from arena patrons. Last year, a hockey tournament was held on the weekend of the parade and the community centre parking lot posed some problems, with cars parked where the organizers had planned to stage the floats for the start of the parade.

Minden Minor Hockey officials will be contacted to see if there is a tournament planned during parade day. If there is, Boyd said that he could arrange for someone to be there early to help direct traffic away from the area that will be used to stage the floats for the parade.

Roads Superintendent Clayton Cameron said that if there is a lot of snow by the day of the parade, he can make sure that the snow is pushed back to maximize the area that would be available for both the parade organizers and the arena patrons.

The upstairs portion of the community centre will be in use for a craft show on the December 3 weekend so the option of using the upper parking lot to get the parade set up is not available.

Reeve Bern Berry said that the municipality would co-operate "in whatever way we can."

The issue of cordoning off part of the community centre parking lot will be discussed at the next Recreation Committee meeting. Councillor Grant Ploard is the chairman of that committee and he will present the concerns of the parade organizers at that meeting. A solution that will give everyone access to the parking lot is expected with the co-operation of minor hockey officials, community centre manager Brian Sisson and the parade organizers.

AHM applies for more

Council for Anson, Hindon and Minden is applying for more infrastructure money. The Townships of Snowdon and Sherborne et al have some unused infrastructure funds and the three parties have endorsed an application to transfer nearly $180,000 in unused funds to Anson, Hindon and Minden.

Reeve Bern Berry publicly commended Clayton Cameron for his work in securing the co-operation of neighbouring townships "for the benefit of the entire county."

Snowdon had $74,629 left over from its allotment, while Sherborne had $104,400 available.

The additional funds, if they are approved, will go toward phase two of the expansion of the municipal office. The project was originally estimated to cost $407,000 but when the actual figure was calculated, including engineering fees, the final total was $650,000. That left a shortfall of about $243,000.

Efforts of witnesses recognized

Two receive $450 cash reward for assistance in identifying robber

by Jerry Grozelle

Assisting the police paid an unexpected dividend for two local women.

Lynn Waugh of Wilberforce and Leanne Carpenter of Minden aided in the investigation of the robbery of the Bank of Montreal in Haliburton in May. They were each presented with a cheque for $450 by Allen Stead, representing the Canadian Bankers Association. The presentation took place in front of the Haliburton Bank of Montreal branch on Labour Day.

"On behalf of the member banks of the Canadian Bankers Association, and particularly the Bank of Montreal, I take great pleasure in presenting each of you with a cheque in the amount of $450," Stead said. "This is in appreciation for the assistance that resulted in the arrest and conviction of the man responsible for the hold-up of the Haliburton branch of the Bank of Montreal on May 10, 1994. Without the assistance you provided, the suspect may never have been captured and this crime would not have been satisfactorily concluded. However, because of your actions, the police were able to bring the perpetrator to justice."

Stead is an investigator with the Bank of Montreal's Corporate Security branch.

Thanks to the co-operation of Waugh and Carpenter, detective Al Bibby of the Minden OPP was able to obtain an arrest warrant for Roger Kendall Oake on the same day as the robbery. Oake appeared in Provincial Court in Lindsay on July 6, where he pleaded guilty and was sentenced to four years in penitentiary by Judge George Inrig.

Oake entered the bank on May 10 and passed a white plastic shopping bag and a note which said "give me your money I have a gun" to bank employee Brenda Fearrey.

Bibby commended Fearrey for remaining calm and complying with Oake's demand.

"She obeyed his instructions, remained cool and made a mental note of Oake's description," Bibby said.

Fearrey's detailed description was communicated to all banks in the area, in case a similar hold-up was planned at another bank.

Waugh, an office clerk with Haliburton County Social Services, heard of the robbery and called her mother-in-law who works at the Bank of Nova Scotia in Wilberforce. When Waugh heard the description of the robber, she telephoned police and informed them that the description fit Roger Oake, who had been in her office before the robbery.

Carpenter, a postal clerk at the Haliburton Post Office, saw a report on CHEX television which gave a description of the robber. She contacted police and said that the suspect had been in the Post Office earlier that morning.

With the help of Waugh and Carpenter, Bibby was able to secure a warrant for the arrest of Roger Oake on the evening of May 10, the day of the robbery.

Oake was arrested by New York State's Niagara Falls County Sheriff's Department on June 3 and turned over to the Minden OPP.

"The successful conclusion to this case was due to the cool-headed actions of Brenda Fearrey and the timely responses of Lynn Waugh and Leanne Carpenter in doing their civic duty," Bibby said. "I believe that Fearrey, Waugh and Carpenter should be recognized as being the people responsible for the rapid successful conclusion to the Haliburton branch of the Bank of Montreal robbery."

Stead, a former Metro Toronto police officer, also credits Bibby for quick action in apprehending the suspect.

"Al Bibby is a real professional," Stead said. "He did a great job. With the help of these two ladies, he had a good, solid warrant the same evening (of the robbery)."

Providing accurate descriptions and contacting the police promptly resulted in rewards for Leanne Carpenter, left, of Minden and Lynn Waugh of Wilberforce. The information they provided was credited with assisting police in tracking down the individual who held up the Haliburton branch of the Bank of Montreal, May 10 of this year. Al Stead, representing the Canadian Bankers Association, presented the cash rewards to the two county residents.

Old Victoria Street School marks 70 years

Principal Judy Tomlinson-Ross supervises as her young charges return to Victoria Street School for another year. The building marks its 70th anniversary this month.

by Andrew Milne

Victoria Street Public school turns a venerable 70 years old this month.

The large red brick building opened for its first school year in September of 1924. It was then called SS No. 3 Dysart — the name is cut into the stone over the main entrance.

As Judy Tomlinson-Ross put it, "It's just oozing history."

Tomlinson-Ross, who is beginning her second year as principal of Victoria Street School, says it was decided to have a big celebration for the seventieth anniversary because it is unclear whether the building will still be in operation for the seventy-fifth.

The student population is rapidly outgrowing the building, and an initiative by the provincial government, calling for the offering of junior kindergarten classes, makes finding a solution that much more pressing. Among other possibilities, the school board may choose to sell the building.

"We just want people to come and remember," says Tomlinson-Ross. "We figure we won't be here for the seventy-fifth... so we thought we'd better do it for the seventieth."

Among other celebrations there will be an anniversary tea Saturday September 17 at the school. Former students are welcome to show up anytime between 1 and 4 pm.

"We want people just to come and remember and share some time with us," says Tomlinson-Ross. "People come in here and remember exactly where their chair was — where their desk was."

There will also be a special presentation at 3 pm by former Director of Education Doug Hodgson, former principal Ruth Gorrie and others who attended or taught at the school. A video presentation of slides from the history of the school has been put together for the occasion.

"... and they never forget who their teacher was," says Tomlinson-Ross. "They'll come in and stand at their spot [and say] 'My desk was here'. It's really neat to see people do that. [It's] just kind of to give them a last chance to come in and see everything and visit."

"People have many pleasant memories here and we look forward to having them come back," says Tomlinson-Ross.

There will also be a dance at the Legion hall September 16 at 8 pm to celebrate the anniversary. Tickets are $5 per person and are available at Paulette's Gifts on Highland Street in Haliburton.

Sewer extension draws questions over costs

by Andrew Milne

The north Kashagawigamog sewer extension inches slowly onwards towards completion.

The project, proposed originally to collect sewage from resorts and other commercial interests — including the PineStone Resort and Wigamog Inn — along the north shore of Kashagawigamog Lake, has been amended to include collection of sewage from private residences along the route.

A public consultation hosted by Dysart municipal council September 2 to solicit suggestions from the community, revealed that some of the people who own those residences are concerned.

In particular, they are concerned about the cost.

"I live on Kashaga Drive," said one land owner. "A lot of people on Kashaga Drive are seasonal cottagers. A lot of them are living on a pension... I think council should realize that the cottagers are not cash cows."

The extension is being proposed because in the past few years readings of phosphate levels in Kashagawigamog Lake have been extremely high.

Phosphate loading in lakes contributes to a number of environmental problems, the most obvious symptom of which is often heavy growth of weeds.

David Ford of Pennford Corporation, a company which organizes public-private partnerships for the financing of community projects such as this one, says the decision to hook up the cottagers to the system came from a desire to use the provincial funding to the best advantage. "We tried to make the design more efficient to pick up as many users as possible," he said.

Also in the interest of maximizing the economy and effectiveness of the system, Pennford Corporation and their partners in the project, Thorburn Penny (involved in the engineering aspects) broke the project into a number of separate contracts representing different areas of service, since certain areas are considerably more expensive in terms of cost per user.

Ford's presentation pointed out that, for one area of the project in particular (an extension along a private road servicing 18 residences) the construction cost per user is estimated at $11,559, even assuming the government pays 67 percent of the cost through a federal/provincial infrastructure grant.

"That's why we broke down the costs into different contracts — because some of them are so expensive for the number of units connected, that it will be a decision that council will have to make. By breaking it down we will have to show what might be the most economically efficient way for... the municipality to do it. If it can cure 80 or 90 percent of the problem by spending 50 percent of the money it seems more efficient than doing certain lines where the costs are prohibitive."

How costs to the user are divided through the project is also up to council, but whatever it decides, there is a $2,600 hook up fee, which, David Clancy of Thorburn-Penny explains, pays for the resident's portion of the expanded sewage treatment plant to which the system will be connected.

Reeve Curry Bishop stated that it was his understanding that the Ministry of the Environment would expect Dysart to pass a bylaw compelling residents along the route of the sewer to connect to the service.

Although some of their membership quite certainly have concerns about the cost, Lake Kashagawigamog Cottage Organization president Mary Hincks says her organization is behind the sewer extension, provided certain conditions are met.

"Our prime comment is that [we] are committed to water quality improvement," says Hincks, "not just maintaining it, but improving it. That is our number one commitment. Therefore we support action which will improve the quality of Lake Kashagawigamog."

Hincks went on to say, however, that she feels improvement may also involve, and probably should involve, initiatives such as educating the public with respect to the use of phosphate free detergents, and naturalizing the shoreline.

Hincks also says the organization has asked that, following expansion of the sewer plant, the municipality participate in annual water tests in the area (which the cottage association is already doing). She has yet to receive a satisfactory answer from council regarding this issue.

Ducks ahoy!

Launching 500 ducks is not the easiest task in the world, particularly when you want to get all of them off to an equal start. Just ask the crew of Lions who performed the task, left, on the banks of the river in front of Campbell's Flower shop September 3. Once in the water, however, the little yellow critters didn't seem to mind their rather unceremonious send-off and quickly adapted to the leisurely downstream float to the finish line just ahead of Minden's Main Street bridge. The plastic ducks were part of the Minden and District Lions Club's annual duck race in which participants "purchase" a duck for $5 in hopes that it will be one of the first three to cross the finish line. All of the 500 ducks up for grabs were sold this year, with the proceeds going to the Lions Club's community activities. The three which crossed the line ahead of their 497 companions were purchased by: J. Crawford of Minden, first prize $500; William Orser of Lindsay, second prize $200; and Debbie Sisco of Minden, third prize, $100.

It is an interesting coincidence that the association to which this newspaper belongs, the Ontario Community Newspaper Association (OCNA), has begun its annual campaign to encourage nominations for the Ontario Junior Citizen of the Year Awards, while at the same time local organizers are preparing for the Terry Fox Run in aid of cancer research.

When he attempted his inspiring cross-Canada run, Terry Fox would not have been eligible for an Ontario Junior Citizen of the Year award. The only thing, however, that would have disqualified him from consideration was his age. Every other aspect of his monumental effort, his courage and determination, his ability to inspire others and build a tidal wave of support which swept this country, and his unselfish approach to life are exactly the qualities which the Ontario Junior Citizen of the Year Awards want to honour.

These awards were created to recognize young people who may not have had as great a national impact as Terry Fox but who, none the less, have done something special in their communities to earn praise and recognition.

Each year since 1981, the Ontario Junior Citizen of the Year Awards have honoured up to 12 young Ontarians and one group of young people from various communities in the province who have made a difference in the lives of those around them. In some cases the difference was a spectacular act of heroism in the face of grave danger. In others it was the willingness to ignore over-whelming odds in the pursuit of a laudable goal or, through living a community-spirited lifestyle, providing an example and inspiration for their peers and the community as a whole. This is truly a young person's award and is limited to those between the ages of 6 and 18.

While not all nominees will be selected to receive an award, each young person or group which is nominated will be recognized with a certificate of congratulations. The award recipients will be guests of honour of the association and the program's patron, Bell Canada, in Toronto in April where the awards will be presented at a luncheon presided over by the province's Lieutenant Governor.

We are seeking the help of the community in recognizing the young people in our province who deserve this honour. If you know of a young person or group who you feel is worthy of this award we would be pleased to assist you in completing a nomination form. Forms and brochures outlining the awards program are available at The Times business office. The deadline for nominations is October 31.

Thank you Stanhope Council

Editor:

Congratulations to the Stanhope Council for three of their programs which I experienced this summer.

The Stanhope Fun Day was top notch, with great things for everyone to see, do, and eat, and virtually no junk. It was well organized, and a pleasure to attend.

The swimming program at Stanhope Park was also excellent. The children I know, who were in-involved, improved their water skills to a considerable degree.

Lastly, but by no means least, is the new recycling program at the Hawk - Halls Lake Dump. It is superior to the one that takes place in my hometown, and I do appreciate its excellent service.

Fed up with the negative letters

Editor:

I am fed up with all the negative letters received in the past regarding Hyland Crest Home. The letters appear to be coming from a single source.

Why don't they give us a break? Perhaps there wouldn't be such turmoil at the home if the qualified nursing staff was left alone to do its job.

The residents are the ones who suffer when this kind of conflict exists.

I get the impression from some of these letters that some of these people have degrees in geriatric nursing and management of the home.

Perhaps they should apply for the Director of Nursing position or Administrator.

The doctors of Hyland crest feel that the care is of the highest order so lets get on with it and let the residents enjoy their home.

Hazel Maxwell,
Minden.

A heartless act

Editor:

This is my letter regarding the story of the puppies and the kittens founds in the Deep Bay Dump (September 6).

First of all I want to say to the persons who did this, you must be a very heartless person to do this to a helpless, defenceless animal. Anyone who would do this should be tried, convicted and severely punished.

You see, I'm an animal lover and I think this is disgusting and I can't believe anyone would do this to a poor innocent animal. I just hope someone who knows you did this, reports you, and you pay the consequences.

The question that always puzzles me when I hear of something like this happening is why weren't homes found for them or why weren't they taken to an animal shelter.

But I guess it's too late for homes for them now. I just hope after this that people keep a close watch for something like this so it won't happen again. I feel that if this is how you want to treat your pets, you shouldn't have any. Animals have feelings too.

P.S. Thanks to the attendant at the dump for his quick response and kind heart for the one kitten that survived.

Arthur discovers Heaven on earth

Tell me Bucko - are you fed up to the teeth with higher taxes, idiotic politicians, crooked officials and nasty, pointy-headed bureaucrats?

Had it up to here with radar traps, dog licenses, and fines for overdue library books?

Feel like you'll go bonkers if you're forced to shell out one more loonie for the GST, the PST the VAT or the Airport Improvement Levy?

If this sounds like you, I have a solution.

All you have to do is stick a For Sale sign on your front lawn, cancel the milk delivery and move yourself to the Kingdom of Heaven.

Heaven on earth, that is. You'll find it on a state map of Oregon, about 30 kilometres south of Salem.

Actually, you don't. The Kingdom of Heaven does not appear on official earthly documents such as road maps. But it's there, nonetheless. The Kingdom of Heaven covers 14 hectares of rolling Oregon countryside. It is presided over by a balding, bearded gentleman with coke-bottle hornrims and the historically resonant monicker of Paul Revere.

That's Pastor Paul Revere, spiritual leader of some 200 faithful adherents and titular head of the not-quite-yet-world-famous Embassy of Heaven Church.

He hasn't always occupied this position — or in fact, this name. Not long ago the pastor was Craig Douglas Fleshman, a clerk in the US Department of Transport. But one day Fleshman decided

Pastor Paul Revere rides again

Black 'n White

by Arthur Black

there must be more to life than a bungalow in the 'burbs', a Chevette in the driveway and the prospect of punching a keyboard forty hours a week for the rest of his life. So he resigned, retired and re-invented himself as Pastor Paul Revere, chief sheperd of the Kingdom of Heaven, Oregon Branch.

What are the advantages of living in Heaven? Well no taxes for starters. Every April, the Pastor receives his Income Tax form in the mail and immediately chucks it, unopened in the trash bin. "The Kingdom of Heaven is not of this world," intones the pastor. "Jesus did not pay taxes."

Jesus most likely didn't carry a valid driver's licence either. That's why Pastor Paul tells his flock to toss their licences, tear up their social security cards, close their bank accounts and forget about car insurance and vehicle registration.

Naturally, all this freedom does not come without a price tag. Every time Pastor Paul attempts to drive out of the Kingdom of Heaven in his white Dodge Dart, he gets stopped by the cops. The state troopers remind the reverend that his car isn't sporting legal licence plates.

They also bring it to his attention that the driver's licence he shows (issued in Heaven) is not considered legal by the Oregon courts of law.

The pastor is unperturbed. When they really hassle him, he simply goes limp and refuses to eat until they back off and leave him alone. "I would rather lose my body," he says, "than my soul."

But how to keep body and soul together? After all, even shepherds in the Kingdom of Heaven have to eat. Pastor Paul has an answer. A little paradisiacal cottage industry, as it were. Pastor Paul flogs Kingdom of Heaven licence plates and also passports to the Kingdom of Heaven at $20 a pop.

Lucrative? Even though they aren't worth the gold-embossed papers they're printed on, the passports are selling like, well, celestial hotcakes.

Reminds me of the story of a famous American public figure by the name of Bishop Fulton J. Sheen. One night on his way to give a lecture at the Philadelphia city hall, the Bishop got lost in a rather bad neighbourhood. He went up to a tough looking guy in front of a bar, told him he was a guest speaker and asked for directions to the city hall. The tough guy told him where to go then asked him what he was talking about.

"I'm speaking about how to get to heaven," said the Bishop. "Would you like to come and listen?"

"Hell, no," said the hood. "You don't even know how to get to City Hall."

CASTLE BATTLE

The county's two Castle Building Supply dealers Emmerson Lumber and Carnarvon Building Supplies went head-to-head two weeks ago on the baseball diamond. Staff from the two stores fielded teams for a game of softball on suitably neutral territory, the West Guilford Community Centre. The recent rains resulted in muddy conditions, with the puddle at home plate being a prime target for pitchers who wanted to splash the batters rather than strike them out. The game, which was all in good fun, was won by Emmerson Lumber 26 to 13. It was reported a good time was had by all and the two stores vow to make it an annual event.

PERFECT PRINTS

Miriam Fick of Minden was the winner of a pair of Tasco 16 x 50 mm super zoom binoculars. The binoculars were offered as the grand prize in a draw held at Perfect Prints at the Heritage Plaza in Minden in conjunction with the introduction of Kodak Royal photographic paper. Throughout the summer, customers were invited to fill in a ballot each time they visited the store. Miriam recently accepted her prize from store owner Laurie Roberts.

CENTRAL OFFICE SERVICES

A new business supply store has opened in Haliburton village. Located in the lower level of the Stedmans Mall, the store features a complete line of office supplies. Owners Betty and Chad Irvine, who operate the H & R Block tax service office out of the same location, also welcome special orders from individuals looking for office supplies. If the item is not in stock, they should be able to have it shipped in two days. The store is open Tuesday to Saturday 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Man dies in 3 car accident

Minden OPP are investigating a fatal, three vehicle accident following the death of a Kitchener man Monday, September 5, on Highway 503, 2.2 km east of the Irondale Road.

John Edward Kaufman, 49, was the driver of a car which crossed the highway into the lane of oncoming traffic. The vehicle collided with a truck driven by Steven Coumbs, 21, of Haliburton.

The third vehicle involved was a van, driven by Michael Kenneth McLeod, 45, of Pickering. His vehicle collided with a trailer towed by the Kaufman car.

Kaufman was pronounced dead at the scene. His wife, Nancy, was seriously injured and was transported to Haliburton where she was soon transferred by air ambulance to St. Mary's Hospital in Kitchener.

Coumbs was taken to Haliburton hospital where he was treated and released.

Sentenced

A Snowdon Township resident has been sentenced to 20 months in jail after having been convicted of seven counts of sexual assault on two children.

Norman Birchmore, 62, of Valley Road was sentenced when he appeared before District Court Judge D. McKinnon in Lindsay.

The judge sentenced the man to 20 months on each of the seven offences, but each sentence will run concurrently. A three year probation order to commence at the end of the jail term, was also imposed against Birchmore.

Minden Skating Club prepares for coming season

The Minden Skating Club is starting to gear up for the coming season. Registration was held last Thursday at the arena.

The winter season will officially start on October 17.

Executive members and directors have been elected for the 1994-95 season.

Jim Garbutt is the president and Joachim Matysek is the vice-president. The secretary is Sue Vanderlip and Leitha Grexton is the treasurer.

The list of directors includes Bev Matysek, Corinne Howell, Linda Pawluch, Cathy Fisher, Lisa Foster, Carolyn Steele, Kelly Harpley, Colin Wilson, Carla Stewart, Liz Lyddiatt, Nancy Garbutt, Toni Carr and Linda Schrader.

The professional coaches are: Jane Symons, David Hollows, Lisa Carr and Tammy Pritchard.

Several of the Minden club members have been skating in Haliburton for the past few weeks in preparation for the coming season of competition. Others have been skating throughout the summer at various locations. Janine Garbutt and Louise Howell have been skating in Ottawa. Andrea and Tristan Pawluch were in Barrie and Lindsay Harpley, Jasmine Wilson, Amanda Barrett and Jennifer Bleakley were in Lindsay.

The first major event of the season will be the sectionals in November, followed by the divisionals in December.

The Minden Skating Club will be hosting the Meet To Skate Invitational on February 4 and 5, with an estimated 200 skaters from across the province expected.

Later in February, the Minden club will host the annual Kawartha Highlands Competition.

New skaters who aren't sure whether club competition is what they want have the opportunity to take advantage of a trial period offer. They can attend the first four nights for a nominal fee and then decide if they want to continue.

Jim Garbutt said that the club has been offering this trial period for the past couple of years and it has been very popular.

"Last year about 20 people took advantage of the trial offer and I think 18 joined the club," he said.

About 80 skaters were members last season and Garbutt says he expects at least that many this season.

Scott Gartshore: "Strict but fair" coaching style

by Jerry Grozelle

Scott Gartshore got off to an impressive start as a hockey coach. Last season, in his rookie season as a coach in Minden Minor Hockey, he led the Tri-County bantam Monarchs to the league championship.

The success of last season earned Gartshore Minden Minor Hockey's Coach of the Year honours.

It may be a tough act to follow.

Gartshore was assistant coach with Bill Little the season before last and he says he learned a lot from the peewee team's coach.

The biggest influence, from a coaching standpoint, for Gartshore was Don "Soup" Campbell, who coached him up through the ranks in the Minden Minor Hockey system.

Campbell was a disciplinarian and Gartshore said: "He was very strict. I thought he was a mean coach at first but I realized that he was being fair. I had the greatest respect for him."

Gartshore played hockey from atom to juvenile in Minden and has played in the men's recreational leagues in Minden and Oshawa.

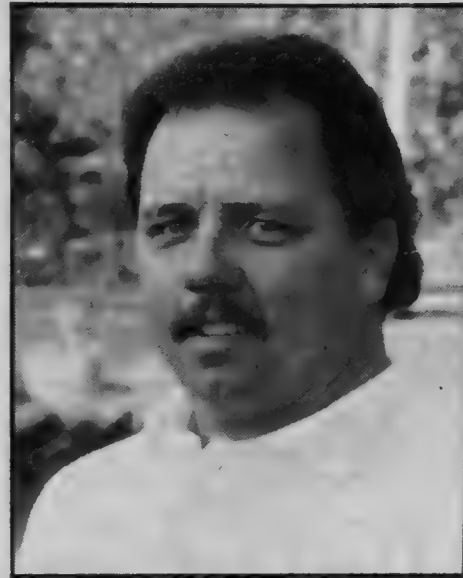

Like many hockey coaches, Scott's son Gavin plays on the team he coaches. But he says the fact that Gavin plays hockey isn't the main reason for his decision to get into coaching.

The reason he decided to become involved was because he says he didn't like seeing players being treated unfairly.

"I didn't like seeing parents dragging their kids all over the country to sit on the bench," he explained. "Every kid should be treated equally. They all signed up to play hockey and they all paid the same amount of money so they should all play the same amount."

He doesn't believe that the best players should get the lion's share of the ice time in an effort to win at all costs.

Gartshore said that he considers himself a "strict but fair" coach. He says discipline is an essential part of the game.

Scott Gartshore will be back to coach the Minden bantam Tri-County Monarchs for his second season.

"We had a really good group of kids and parents last year," Gartshore said. "I hope we have as good a group this year."

Gartshore credits manager Brian Hamilton, trainer Bill Irvine and coaching assistant Wayne Henderson for contributing to the team's success last season.

Lob ball tournament set for Saturday

The season is coming to a close for the Minden Mixed Lob Ball League. The last regular season games will be played Wednesday evening and the league tournament is slated for Saturday, September 17.

The one-day championship tournament this coming Saturday will pit the first place team against the 12th place team. Second will take on 11th and so on down the line.

The first game of the tournament for each team will decide if it goes into the championship round (with a win) or the consolation side (with a loss).

Conservation officer offers advice for duck hunters

by Jerry Grozelle

The waterfowl and small game hunting seasons will open on September 20 in the Minden area and Conservation Officer Dave Ferguson has some advice for hunters.

Ferguson cautions hunters to be safety conscious, not only with firearms. He advises those who will be in boats to wear life jackets.

Ferguson said he has personal experience in the value of life jackets. He credits his life jacket with saving his life when he ended up in the cold water of Four Mile Lake a couple of years ago.

Ferguson said that leaving your life jacket under the seat of the boat is like waiting until you are about to be in a head-on collision to do up your seatbelt.

"There just isn't time," he said. "Life jackets are very important, especially this time of year when the water is cold."

Ferguson also cautions that ministry personnel will be out in full force looking for Fish and Game Act and Migratory Birds Convention Act violations.

Fines for the latter have increased dramatically since the Act was revised. Maximum fines of $300 were common prior to the changes. Now, in the case of an individual who is convicted, is subject to fines not exceeding $50,000. In the case of indictable offenses, fines can be as high as $100,000.

Among the most common offenses Ferguson sees in the field is having loaded firearms in vehicles.

"It's the stupidest thing, he said. 'They risk of a dreadful accident.'"

Unencased firearms after dark and failure to obtain the proper licence(s) are also common offenses.

The Outdoors Card alone is not a small game licence unless the small game tag was purchased at the same time. Ferguson adds that a migratory bird hunting licence is still required to hunt waterfowl.

November 1 deadline looms over access debate in protest, and the HFOA, of which Schleifenbaum is a member, declared that it would cut off all public access to its holdings as of November 1 if the rebate or similar arrangement were not reinstated.

This action, the local Chamber of Commerce members seemed to agree, would effectively kill winter tourism in Haliburton County, dealing a serious blow to an already struggling economy. It has been estimated that 60% of local snowmobile and cross-country ski trails would be affected. As a result, the Chamber, along with members of local snowmobile and ski clubs, agreed to meet with a representative of the HFOA last week to organize a delegation to send to Queen's Park to meet with the Minister of Natural Resources, Howard Hampton.

Participants at the meeting spent most of two hours hammering out a common stand to present at Queen's Park, after which Chamber of Commerce president Brian Dean asked the following of HFOA president Godfrey Tyler:

"If we make a presentation — if we take the time — and everything clicks and over the next six to eight weeks they come up with a solution that is viable to them, that they can live with, that they can save face with, and that is reasonable to us, and starts to solve your problem, would you go along with it?"

Tyler responded that "promises at this point to the forest owners are useless... unless there is something in place... and people have signed in blood saying that it will occur," the forest owners would not be satisfied.

Tyler was then asked how he could hold to this position, considering that the current government is nearing the end of its mandate and the odds of a settlement occurring in time to meet the November deadline are virtually nil, potentially putting thousands of people out of work.

He responded that the owners have been working on the problem for some time now, have had numerous promises made to them, and have yet to see anything concrete.

Participants at the meeting were also especially upset when Tyler stated that he had information HFOA members had been offered a settlement by the government, but had refused on the basis that it did not solve the problem in the rest of the province.

"They've been ignoring that fundamental issue of fairness," said Tyler. "It's a provincial issue... we have to look at it and deal with it as a forestry issue, advanced stewardship... a generational issue."

But many people present at the meeting seemed to feel that Haliburton County was going to suffer tremendously on behalf of the rest of the province if the forester owners insisted on sticking to this position.

Sharon Holman of the Bancroft Chamber of Commerce, said, "If an offer was made and it was turned down and this county is still being blackmailed or threatened with the loss of many, many businesses, why should anybody in this county cooperate if the chance is that when you're offered something again you're going to turn it down? Somehow it doesn't seem very fair to me."

Later in a conversation with The Times, Schleifenbaum stated categorically that no such offer was ever made by the government. "That was a mis-communication," he said.

Tyler also stated that, although forest owners in other parts of the province had expressed support, he knew of no other organizations which planned to use the tactic of closing their trails.

The meeting did however contain an encouraging note. Asked repeatedly if the owners would consider backing away from their position on the November 1 deadline if the delegation had done everything it could and managed to get an acceptable proposal, Tyler said, "If the forest owners are going to change their stance, how can the community allow them to do it with dignity?"

Brian Cross, formerly a forester with the Ministry of Natural Resources who is working as a forestry consultant, says the issue of forest management on private land in this country has become extremely pressing.

He also points out that Haliburton is something of an anomaly in regard to the amount of privately owned land, and it is for this reason the problem is so evident here.

The Times had discussed the issue with Cross before the meeting

September 8, and had asked him whether the Dysart municipal bylaw (no. 1339) regulating the cutting of trees would have any effect should the forest owners carry out their threat to clear cut their holdings. Schleifenbaum, for his part, stated, "The bylaw has no teeth. The fines are too small."

Cross responded, "I think asking whether owners of large forest properties contravene tree cutting bylaws is, by comparison, of less importance than this question... to what extent should the public be considered as stakeholders in the long term sound management of private forest lands? I think it is obvious from the perspective of environmental concerns alone (setting aside forest product values for now), there must be strong public concern, sooner or later."

"It follows logically, and here's the bottom line, that any mismanagement of the unique private land forest resources of Haliburton County can not be acceptable to the public, whether such effects might be attributable to willful intent, inadequate forest management programs, ignorance, or neglect. Such potential threats to an investment in the long term benefits of forest management can not be considered acceptable."

"Consider this," he went on to say, "wildlife entering private land remain a public resource, and no landowner has the right to interfere with such resources (without proper authority). It is forest vegetation which sustains our wildlife resources, yet in many respects, the use of these plant resources are essentially subject to the particular motivations and interest of each individual landowner... quite an odd situation if you consider the inherent complexities of most effective resource management techniques, which under ideal circumstances would clearly benefit from coordinated management of plant, animal, water and mineral resources on the available land base, including various land tenures."

Welfare numbers decrease

The general welfare caseload for Haliburton County declined again in August, mirroring the results in other parts of the province.

Haliburton County Director of Social Services Morris Honeyman reports that the cost to the county of General Welfare Assistance (GWA) dropped to $320 023.14 in August from $328,122.88 for July. The county pays 20% in GWA cases. The province covers the other 80%.

Statistics released by the county for July also show 561 households received GWA down from 608 households in June, when GWA cost the county $357,111.26. By press time, the county officials did not have numbers on how many households received GWA in August.

This is the sixth month in a row the county has posted a decline.

Honeyman says one reason the drop appears more pronounced in Haliburton County is that the local economy is extremely seasonal in nature.

"We're hoping to have a good September," says Honeyman, "and then we always look forward to the influx of recipients in October, November, December, January, February and March. But because we're in a tourist economy here — normally from May through to October they usually go down... with July and August being relatively the best months. Now it's turned out that it's been better in June and July."

Honeyman explained that this is probably because there were increased costs in August that hadn't been there before. The government, he says, changed over to paying the back-to-school bonus in August rather than September.

Bucket brigade unable to stop flames

Fire levels Hawk Lake cottage

by Carol Moffatt

A Toronto man whose boat-access cottage burnt to the ground over the Labour Day weekend has nothing but praise for the quick action of his "bucket brigade" neighbours, despite the devastating loss.

Smoke from the Little Hawk Lake fire was seen from Little Hawk Landing Saturday afternoon, but owner Gord Stapleton said he and others thought it was someone burning leaves.

"We went over to check and when we pulled up in the the boat we saw flames in the corner of the building licking out of the walls. We tried to get near it, but there was no hope. It was already hot and full of smoke and there was nothing left to do but go back to the marina to get Sharon (Hewson) to call the fire department," said Stapleton from his Scarborough home.

But by the time Stapleton went to phone, help was already on the way. As he headed back to the mainland, full-time lake resident Don Stewart was already speeding to the cottage with the Hawk Lake portable fire pump, and several boats full of people were headed toward the cottage with dozens of buckets.

Friends and strangers worked hand in hand to try to extinguish the blaze, but fire quickly devoured the small, 40-year-old pine cottage despite their efforts. About 30 people formed a line up the hillside, hauling water up and passing buckets back down.

Stapleton credits the efforts of the brigade with preventing the fire from spreading through the heavily wooded area surrounding the cottage.

When Stanhope fire fighters arrived at the landing, pumps and equipment were rushed from the fire trucks and loaded onto two waiting boats from Oakview Marina. But the fire had moved so quickly that the fire fighters could only extinguish the blaze, secure the area and debris, and search the remains for clues to what caused it.

The family's entire Hawk Lake history of mementos, trinkets and photos was lost in the fire; nothing but the front deck and the fireplace were left standing after the blaze.

"The only thing left was a looney that (Fire Chief) Bob Pollard flipped to me in the boat. They found it when they were raking through the debris," said Stapleton.

Despite the length of time it took for the fire department to get out to the cottage by boat, Stapleton has neither complaints about the emergency service nor any regrets about being a water access cottager.

"The place was gone in less than half an hour. There was nothing anyone could have done. When Stanhope (fire department) arrived they contained the fire very well so nothing else was damaged, but the place went up so quickly no one could have saved it even if it had been at the landing," he said.

Stapleton, who says he's still in shock over the whole thing, helped his father build the family cottage in 1955 right after he graduated from the University of Toronto.

"I've spent a lifetime up there. It's two-thirds of my life. All the materials were brought by boat and everything was done by hand: the digging, the pouring, the cutting of the wood. A place like that is part of you," he said.

Despite the efforts of neighbouring cottagers, who formed a bucket brigade up the steep incline from the lake, there was little that could be done to save the cottage of Gord Stapleton on Big Hawk Lake.

The hardest part, he said, was having to tell his three children, all of whom grew up at the cottage.

"It was tough; there were great tears over it," he said.

Stapleton considers himself lucky to have such wonderful neighbours on the lake.

"All I can say it that I have a million thanks to everyone who came to help. The people were incredible; people offered us sleeping bags and accommodation - even people who didn't know us," he says.

The cause of the fire is believed to be electrical.

G. Connelly of Haliburton was the winner of a hind of beef, the first prize in a raffle held recently by the Haliburton County Information Centre. The draw took place last Tuesday at the Centre's office with Murray Fearrey selecting the winning ticket.

Keith Everson of Lindsay won 12 steak filets, the second prize. Members of the centre's board and other volunteers sold the tickets throughout the summer to help finance the centre's work for seniors and others throughout the county.

Paul Trotter of Stroud won two pork loins, the third prize, and Pat O'Shaughnessy of Minden received the fourth prize of ten rib steaks. The final prize of ten pork chops went to P. Child of Hamilton. All the meat will come from Coneybeare's Butcher Shop in Minden.

In addition to the office in Haliburton, the Information Centre operates an office in Minden in the basement of the municipal office, each Tuesday. The staff helps seniors and others in their dealings with various governments; dealings such as income tax, pensions and housing.

Skiers seek municipal assistance

John Teljeur asked for the help of Anson, Hindon and Minden Council to develop a Nordic ski trail from Hart Lodge to the community centre in Minden.

Teljeur told council that two major obstacles stand in the way of the development of the cross country ski trail. He asked for council to provide the use of a bulldozer for an estimated seven days to clear a path around the two hills that are unpassable.

He appealed to council, saying that without the municipality's assistance, there was little hope of getting the project completed this year.

Reeve Bern Berry explained that no provisions had been made in the budget for such an expense. At an estimated $50 per hour, the use of a bulldozer for that length of time would be very expensive.

Berry pointed out that the municipality has had to deal with some other unexpected expenses and that council would have to look seriously at the request. He suggested that if council found that it wasn't able to help out with the project this year, Teljeur approach the new council in January of 1995 to have it considered for the next budget.

Teljeur apologized for the timing of the request. He said that it would be a one-time expense and that the trail wouldn't need any improvements for another 10 years.

"I wouldn't want to see the Minden trail sit dormant for another year," he said. "We're trying to get access to the Minden area. It's something for the whole area."

Clayton Cameron will look at the area to see if he can get a closer estimate of the time it would take and the cost to bulldoze a path around those obstacles.

"It's exciting that you're giving some priority to the Minden trail," Councillor Jeanne Anthon said.

Leaving our mark in the north

The white domes of the radar station stand out sharply against the grey of the mountain top.

At the head of Mercy Bay on the east coast of Baffin Island, the structures were once part of the DEW (Distant Early Warning) Line designed to pick up the first sign of missiles from the Soviet Union.

Upgraded into the NWS (North Warning System) to detect evasive, low-flying Cruise missiles, the station is no longer occupied. Computers now fire information via satellite to a NORAD centre in North Bay.

Ironically, we came on a Russian ship, the Alla Tarasova, and the Russian crew took us ashore without meeting any resistance.

The ship has been transporting about 90 tourists to visit Inuit communities from Cape Dorset to Pangnirtung on Baffin Island and their Danish counterparts on Greenland.

By experiencing the unique wildlife and cultural communities of the Arctic, we are seeing the world from a very different perspective.

Aboard the Alla Tarasova, it's hard to believe that for decades the crew was our enemy as the two superpowers were locked in a terrifying buildup of nuclear weapons. It was appropriately called MAD (Mutual Assured Destruction), the crazy notion that there could be winners even when both sides could blow each other to bits.

Today, the "Cold War" seems like ancient history.

The enormous effort to sustain a campaign to end the arms race often gave way to burnout, disillusionment and despair. But the dramatic shift in geopolitics over the past decade could not have been predicted and should give inspiration and hope to grassroots groups now working on environmental issues.

The struggle to save a bit of wilderness, stop pollution or change legislation is often difficult and dis-

"... a testament to the incredible ingenuity of human beings."

Reflections

by David Suzuki

heartening, but globally more and more people at the local level are striving to build sustainable communities and environments. Our new-found "friends" give us hope.

Here in the north, the land and climate seem forbidding and barren. Yet life, including the most recent arrivals - human beings - has managed not only to survive but flourish.

There have been different strategies to succeed here. At the most fertile time of the year, in the long daylight hours of summer, birds arrive from distant places to exploit the sudden burst of productivity, then depart for other parts of the world.

This is a place where "small is beautiful." Century-old "trees" with trunks only five centimetres in diameter creep along the ground while in tiny microniches behind rocks or a dip in the soil, miniature flower gardens bloom in profusion.

But in this landscape of dwarf plants, large animals like polar bears, musk ox and caribou also flourish. They survive here by ranging across vast distances while armed with exquisite genetic adaptations for this climate and landscape. But it is the presence of our species which is most impressive, a testament to the incredible ingenuity of human beings.

From rock cairns to tent rings and bone struts for tent skins, the enduring relics attest to the vigor of past human settlements. Books about the early non-Inuit explorers reveal that their success was in direct proportion to their willingness to utilize the knowledge and experience of the Inuit people. In today's Inuit settlements, the wooden houses and concrete buildings are alien transplants, replicas of southern homes which pay little attention to the realities of the culture and landscape of the original inhabitants of the north.

Here, as in so many other parts of the world, from the Americas to Africa and Australia, most newcomers and colonisers arrived without respect for the indigenous people, the local flora and fauna and the land. They simply superimposed their notions of progress and development.

The Inuit are 20th-century people, not museum pieces of a past way of life. But each new technology, from snowmobiles to synthetic materials and television, catapults them away from their cultural roots and traditions.

An Inuk remarked to me, "When television came, young people lost the need for elders."

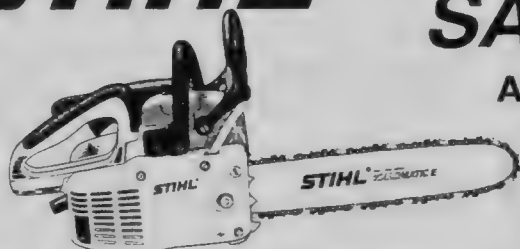

When the communications satellite, Anik-2, broke down recently, we hardly noticed the effect in the south because signals were simply switched to other satellites. But in the north, all lines - faxes, television, computer networks, telephones - were out for a day. It was a disturbing demonstration of the extent to which northern settlements are already dependent on modern technology and how vulnerable they have become.

Yet, now there is eager discussion about locking the Arctic more tightly into the information super highway because it means progress.

In this breathtaking part of the globe, we may see with greater clarity the roots of many of our own social and ecological problems in the south.

Bus ride includes stop for Chelsea buns

Hi folks. It will be good when this cold snap is over.

Saturday evening Elva Deacon came and gave us an hour of piano music. We enjoyed it very much. Elva plays by ear. Thank you very much Elva.

Sunday, Estella Burch gave us a pleasant afternoon. She read a chapter of another good book. Thanks Estella. In the evening chapel service was conducted by Rev. John Burgess, with June Mason playing the organ.

Monday afternoon the residents watched a video in the Primrose lounge.

There was crafts in the craft room on Tuesday. Volunteers were Dottie Muirhead and Donna Wallace. Tuesday night Corinne Arsenault helped us play a couple of tables of cards. Thanks Corinne.

This week we held poet's corner. We composed a poem

Senior League

by Winnifred Barnum

that shows some of the things the volunteers do for the home.

Wednesday morning there was fitness and in the afternoon some of the residents from Primrose Lane and Carnation Way went for a bus ride to Kinmount and as far as Irondale. On the way into town, Doris noticed a little restaurant that was open. We decided to get our ice cream there. They were out of ice cream, but had some good looking home baking. The owner does the baking herself. There were Chelsea buns which looked especially good, so almost everyone decided on one, along with a drink of juice or pop.

The verdict was that the buns were delicious. If you are up that way, try her home baking. We enjoyed it all the way home.

Bingo was held Wednesday evening instead of Thursday since Lee Ann Schlosser was unable to be here on her regular night. Thank you Lee Ann.

Thursday tea party was hosted by the ladies from Kinmount Anglican church. The tea was delicious. One of the ladies played the piano for a sing-along. The ladies included Joyce Hills, Audrey Silver, Marion Austin, Lorraine Campbell and her children, Bri and Sarah, Joan Hymans, Marion Scott, Dorothy Anderson, Gladys Anderson, Win Wilson, Gladys Crego and Maggin Kylus. Pat Scott was a volunteer who helped with the residents. We sincerely thank these ladies.

May and Ray Cameron and Jackie Yateman from Peterborough took me out for supper Thursday night.

On Friday, happy hour was held in the afternoon. Mike and Connie Biagi and Frank Faulkner provided the entertainment with Doris playing the piano. Everyone enjoyed themselves. The ever-faithful volunteers were Don and Ellen Holden, Dottie Muirhead, Mary Guillemain and Pearl Cowen. Thanks to the entertainers and volunteers.

We are in need of acorns. Could we ask the children to collect any they may come across. We are making angels from pine cones and milk weed pods and the acorns are the heads. Autumn is not far off. There are many colours on the trees already. Goodbye.

Trent Severn report

Reservoir water levels remain above long term averages for this time of year. A decline of five per cent down to 66.7 per cent of the total storage capacity was observed on August 29. Tributary flows have been reduced for the last week of August.

The Otonabee River discharge has been increased to the 35-39 cubic metres per second range and likely will be maintained near that as the Kawartha Lakes hold near the top of their navigation ranges.

With late summer coolness, the evaporation losses of the past month should diminish. Given normal precipitation, river flow in the watershed will likely increase somewhat.

$463,000 in infrastructure grants approved for Stanhope projects

Four projects in the Township of Stanhope, worth $463,857, have been approved under the Canada/Ontario Infrastructure Works program, will create an estimated 10 person-years of employment, Municipal Affairs Minister Ed Philip, Victoria-Haliburton MP John O'Reilly and Reeve Fred Gardner announced today.

Funding will be used to reconstruct Stanhope Big Hawk Road including rock excavation and resurfacing; upgrading Stanhope's North Shore Road, east including patching, ditching, repairs and resurfacing; construct additions to the community hall and fire hall and to upgrade heating, plumbing and electrical in each building; construct three additional hangar units at the Municipal Airport and improve the surface of all 14 hangar units at the airport.

These projects will create an estimated 435 person-weeks of employment.

Work on the community and fire hall project will be completed by June 1995 while construction on the other projects should be completed by October 1994.

"In addition to creating jobs, these projects will meet the public demand for improved facilities, safer, more modern roads and improved quality of life because of enhanced recreational facilities," said Philip.

"The initiatives in the township, funded by the Canada/Ontario Infrastructure Works program, exemplify the program. They will improve municipal services and subsequently, the quality of life for Stanhope families. In addition, the projects will create valuable employment and more modern roads will add to the communities' accessibility and long-term growth," said O'Reilly.

"The approval of four projects under the Canada/Ontario Infrastructure program for the township of Stanhope will help meet the immediate need of renewed and enhanced roads and other public facilities in the municipality," said Gardner. "The township of Stanhope is proud to be a partner with the federal and provincial governments in creating an estimated 435 person-week employment in the area and helping accelerate economic recovery throughout the county."

Canada/Ontario Infrastructure Works is a $2.1 billion shared-cost program designed to create jobs through local priority projects which will improve the province's infrastructure and therefore its competitive position. Canada, Ontario and local partners are each contributing one-third of the project funding.

The program, which is expected to create up to 37,000 direct and indirect jobs, is a positive example of the federal, provincial and local levels of government working cooperatively to foster economic development and growth.

IN MEMORIAM

HAMILTON, Eunice: Passed away September 7, 1993. Sadly missed by daughter Joan, grandchildren Tom, Michelle, Maureen, David & Stephanie and great-grandchildren Jordan, Lisa, Kattie & Bryan. "A Little Tribute To Say We All Remember."

IN MEMORIAM

HOGG: In loving memory of a dear mother, grandmother and great-grandmother, Waneeta, who passed away September 9, 1992.

Oft and oft our thoughts do wander
To the grave not far away
Where we laid our dear mother
Just two years ago today.
Sadly missed by Yvonne, Eric, Ian and families.

HOGG, Waneeta: Loving wife, mother, grandmother and great-grandmother who passed away September 9, 1992.

As each day passes, her memories linger
Our hearts ache with sadness
And silent tears flow
When our life seemed hard
Or things went wrong
She there to help comfort and console.

Though her wonderful smile is gone forever
And her kind hand we cannot touch
Still have so many sweet memories

Of the one we love so very much.
Her memory we treasure which we'll never part
Time cannot change our feelings or our sorrow
We'll always hold her close within our hearts
Even though she left us two years ago.

Sadly missed and never forgotten by daughter Margaret, son John, grandchildren Terrence, Meagan, David and Lesia, great-granddaughter Christina and by her husband Lawrence.

JOHNSTON, Ellwood: In loving memory of my husband who passed away suddenly September 12, 1985.

I was there beside you when you died

Although we never said goodbye

I will remember my life through
The last few words I shared with you.

You're resting where no shadows fall,
In peaceful sleep you await us all.

God will link the broken chain,
When one by one, we'll meet again.

Sadly missed by his wife, Ruby.
